- Making money while controlling risk should be the sole purpose for your trading.
- If you are focused on preserving your money and sincere about making it in this business, you stand a far greater chance of success than the average Joe who "plays Forex" or pretends he is a real trader.
- You have a 90% chance in blowing our your account within 3 months from opening it.
- Just because it is called day trading does not mean it is every day trading.
- You can make a fortune in this business if you are patient, disciplined, & focused. You do not need a lot to make a lot either.
- Lower your expectations and extend your time horizons.
- You are entering the world of the most elite financial predators in the world.
- If you were to make 25 pips a week, risking 2% per trade, you would more than double your equity every year. This comes to a lowly 6% return per month. This is a really sound objective for your first 3-6 months trading and it is absolutely achievable.
- Overtrading, trading without a plan, not using a protective stop, and over-leveraging your account are sure fire ways to blow out your trading account.
- There are specific times of the day & night you will want to be prepared to study the market conditions for potential setups. It shouldn't be any more than 3 hours.
- There are no shortcuts or fast tracks to consistency, only the day to day steps everyone else already took to get there as well.
- You will find trading enjoyable and rewarding once you learn the market dynamics that are in motion each trading day.
